

Empowering Students, Engaging Families

Research Study

You are invited to participate in a 9-month research study to examine the effects of an education focused transition program. If you agree to participate, your family will be randomly assigned to the FES treatment group or the control group. The treatment group will complete surveys and receive FES services. The control group will complete surveys and access traditional community-based services.

Home- & School-Based Educational Support

If you are randomly assigned to the Fostering Educational Success (FES) program group, you will be assigned a highly trained and dedicated Family Coach. This Family Coach will work with you, your family, your youth, and their school to create positive educational experiences and successful school outcomes. FES goals include improving youth and caregiver school connectedness, empowering youth academic engagement, and increasing overall family cohesion.

All research participants will also receive a stipend in the form of a gift card for the completion of three rounds of surveys; one at the beginning, one during, and one at the end of the study.
